

Dr. Damjan Kukovec

Senior Lecturer at Middlesex
School of Law in London

His passion for law sparked in his academic years and still lives on. He simply loves law, which is reflected in his heartiness for content, work with students, and professional commentary.

He knows how to translate a theoretical perspective into the right answers to the most persistent questions in concrete cases. He has shown this when he practised for the Legal Service of the European Commission, clerked for the Appeals Chamber of the Special Court for Sierra Leone and practiced at the European Court of Justice.

He is a visiting professor at many universities around the world, he advises the EU institutions, participates in various conferences and seminars, and publishes his work in the most prestigious journals.

” The tragedy is that one of the EU Member States most receptive of new ideas, most open to intellectual, social and democratic experimentation and by far most welcoming of foreign intelligentsia decided to continue its course of action on the existing spectrum of thinking and exit the Union.
